House music is a genre of electronic dance music that originated in Chicago in the early 1980s. It is characterized by a repetitive four-on-the-floor beat, a syncopated bassline, and soulful vocals. House music has been a major influence on many other genres of music, including pop, R&B, and hip-hop.

The repetitive nature of house music can be a great tool for worship songwriters. It can help to create a sense of groove and momentum, and it can also be used to create a hypnotic effect that can draw listeners in.

Here are a few house music prompts that you can use to get started writing your own worship songs:

- Start with a simple four-on-the-floor beat. This is the foundation of house music, and it can help to create a sense of groove and momentum.
- Add a syncopated bassline. This is another essential element of house music, and it can help to add some extra funk to your song.
- Use soulful vocals. House music is often characterized by soulful vocals, so don't be afraid to let your voice shine through.
- Create a hypnotic effect. The repetitive nature of house music can be used to create a hypnotic effect that can draw listeners in. Try using repetition and layering to create a sense of atmosphere.
- Experiment with different tempos. House music can be played at a variety of tempos, so don't be afraid to experiment to find what works best for your song.

Here is an example of a worship song that I wrote using some of these prompts:

```
Verse 1 I lift my hands to You In this holy place Your presence f
```

I hope these prompts help you to write your own worship songs inspired by house music. Don't be afraid to experiment and find your own unique sound.
